Inside a perfumer's workshop, you will enter a space where every detail is designed to be perceived even before it is understood. Among bottles, essences, and raw materials, you will be welcomed by Luca Fisichella, a Florentine perfumer, who will guide you in discovering his work and his olfactory universe.

An experience that invites you to slow down and listen to what normally goes unnoticed.

During the meeting, you will explore different olfactory families, smelling and comparing floral, woody, spicy, and more unexpected notes. You will discover how a fragrance is born, what balances make it recognizable, and how scent is closely linked to memory and emotions.

As the essences unfold, the way you perceive them also changes, becoming more attentive, more precise.
And at a certain point, you're no longer just smelling, but you begin to recognize, distinguish, and interpret what you sense.

A different way to experience Florence, coming into contact with an invisible language made of memory, matter, and sensibility.
